

Program Shaping Up for Powwow Here August 17, 18, 19

Big Program Arranged for 3-Day Powow

The program for the Lemon Grove Powow Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 17, 18 and 19, is taking shape.

The big feature of the opening day will be the mammoth parade, which will take place at 6:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chappelle are chairmen of the parade, assisted by a group of local Masons. For information concerning entrance and place in the parade call Mrs. Chappelle, Homelands 6-8115.

Grant Hadley is chairman of the concessions, which are under the supervision of the Lions Club. His phone is H-9-0471.

The children's parade on Saturday morning will be under the direction of the PTA. Mrs. T. A. Keaton, H-6-9470, can furnish information concerning this event.

All youth activities during the Powow will be under the direction of the Y's Men's Club.

The Powow will be on the air Thursday morning, August 17, over KFSD on the Heaven on Earth program at 10:15.

Quite a few haircure adornments are cropping out here and there around town. Various hues, colors and styles are showing up on mugs which were thought to be devoid of any crop. One party, we understand, is leaving town to raise his. He brags he'll outshine all the rest when he returns in two weeks.

Hi Neighbor

by Mae Rex Graham

First in the news, continually in our minds is this terrible conflict into which our boys are being sent. Bravely they go, asking only one thing that the world's greatest foe—Communism—can be stamped out, for only then can we have peace.

What can we do to stay safely at home?

Sacramento, the capital city of our State, has given the first important answer. Each day at a given time the people of Sacramento unite in prayer for peace.

That is a challenge to the churches of Lemon Grove and all other communities over our great state to lead the people in fixing a specific time for prayers for peace.

The same God who heard the prayers of our forefathers and helped them save our Nation, still answers our prayer. This prayer crusade could extend across our nation and to other countries over the world.

The following poem was contributed by James H. Prater, R.A.F. in the War Cry:

WHAT THEN?

Peace! and what then?
Self again?
Let others die! It matters not
While we're not asked to share their lot,
We feel no pain.

Peace! and what then?
Prayer again?
Humble confession of a need of Him
To keep us pure and free from sin.

To love again!
Peace! and what then?
Build again!
Out of the tragic loss of war
Can come chances lost before,
To live again.

Peace! and what then?
Peace for aye!
But only if you play your part,
And strive with mind, and soul,
and heart.

Let none say "Nay!"

Hold Navy Relief Carnival Aug. 3-5

Carnival spirit will prevail at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, when the annual Navy Relief Carnival, bigger and better than ever before, swings open its gates to the citizens of San Diego, August 3, 4 and 5.

Quelling all rumors that the carnival might be cancelled, Maj. Gen. William T. Clement, Depot Commanding General, announced the plans for the carnival are proceeding "full speed ahead" with this year's fun-fest scheduled to be the biggest and best yet.

All profits from the carnival go to the local Navy Relief Society for use in this area.

With all the color and glamor of carnival time, there will be fun galore for the whole family, including free stage entertainment.

Featuring both Miss Joanne Durant, Miss San Diego and Miss California of 1950 and Mrs. Francis Cloyd, Mrs. America of 1949, as well as screen, stage and television stars, plus plenty of local talent, the show will be kept moving right along with such capable "emcees" as John Lund, Hollywood film star, who will handle the mike on Saturday night.

Miss Durant will judge a beauty contest and Mrs. Cloyd will appear in her act "Behind the Crystal Ball" assisted by master magician Bill Risley.

Music will be furnished by the Marine Corps Recruit Depot Orchestra under the baton of T-Sgt. Ken Marshall.

Beta Sigma Phi Council Breakfast

The San Diego City Council of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority was hostess to the Southern California Council at breakfast Sunday in the Cafe del Rey Moro, Balboa Park.

Mrs. Belle Benchley, curator of San Diego Zoo and an international honorary member of Beta Sigma Phi, was honored guest. The distinguished zoo director and author spoke, comparing the local zoo with those he visited on a recent trip to Europe. A zoo theme in decorations was carried out honoring Mrs. Benchley.

Adding beautifully to the theme was the presence of Mrs. Dorothy Simpson, "Miss Peacock of San Diego for 1949 and 1950." Mrs. Simpson, attired in a brilliant peacock costume, was the San Diego entry in the Parade of Units, a contest among the Association of Cosmetologists at the State convention in San Francisco last year. Her hairdress was designed by a member of the San Diego Hairstyling Panel. She appeared through courtesy of the Cosmetologists association.

Mrs. W. D. Arnold, vice-president of the San Diego City Council was general chairman and Mrs. Vera Schultz, council director, who gave the invocation.

The members enjoyed a visit to the zoo as guests of Mrs. Benchley following the breakfast.

Attending from Lemon Grove were Mmes. Clarence Renning, Harry Martin, Don Beebe, C. I. Martin, Willis Richardson, Robert Argo, W. H. Carpenter and Robert Burns.

Kiwanians Urge All Out Effort in Korean Crisis

Rev. Alex Muhline, president of the La Mesa Kiwanis Club, gave one of his forceful talks before the local Kiwanis Club Monday noon.

The Kiwanis Club has sent a telegram to President Truman advising him that the local Kiwanians are back of him in the Korean crisis 100%, and asking him to put everything America has got into the struggle to prevent another Dunkirk.

The Lemon Grove, La Mesa and El Cajon Kiwanis Clubs are going to present a great show at Grossmont High School auditorium in the near future, under the direction of Franklin The Great, magician.

Frank Berger, as he is known among acquaintances, is working in Lemon Grove as a carpenter at present. And is also preparing to go on the road with a show which he is now gathering together here. This is to be his farewell tour, after which he will retire to his San Diego county home.

He will probably present an act during the coming Powow. The Kiwanis Club will meet at the Community Center next Monday at 12:10. Lt. Gov. R. Winn Ward of El Centro will pay a visit to the club at that time.

The date of the Cub Scout Jamboree Derby has been changed to August 13 instead of August 6.

Those Were the Good Old Days

A F. Sonka brought a few old newspapers into the Review office last week, reading of which is most interesting.

The Scout of June 17, 1938, carries a picture on the front page of Dr. F. P. White, 74; Sam Frazier, 92; and J. H. Halley, 84.

The occasion was an annual luncheon of the Lemon Grove Men's Club at which elderly residents of the community were honored guests.

Geo. W. Casteel was president of the club and introduced as the speaker, the late Forrest Warren, San Diego Union columnist. Andy Anderson and Tony Sonka arranged the program.

Others among the guests present were A. J. Hayes, 70, here 25 years; Jas. O. La Perle, 65, here 22 years; J. E. O'Hara, 75, here 4 years; A. L. Jenner, 75, 17 years; J. J. Glenn, 70, 10 years.

W. A. Powers, 77, here 20 years; J. W. Near, 80, 27 years; B. D. Baxter, 73, 5 years; H. D. Massey, 86, 18 years; E. L. Blose, 82, 10 years; L. Schug, 82, 27 years; A. McBride, 80, 36 years.

Ask for Reading Matter for Troops

Nearly 25,000 anglers have competed in the San Diego Yellowtail Derby since it opened on April 15. Top mark has been a yellowtail weighing 50 pounds, a big mark for local fishermen to throw at.

The qualifying period ends on August 20, with the 400 top competitors fishing on Derby Days, September 9 and 10.

BIRD DENIES RUMOR

David Bird of San Diego County, president of the California State Supervisors Association, has issued a denial of the story circulated by Pension Promoter George H. McLain to the effect that the Supervisors seek to cut pensions by $10. Bird's denial should be an assurance to pensioners that, as far as his organization is concerned, they need have no fears.

A Tribute to Miss Rebecca Halley

By MARY G. MARSTON

The life of Miss Rebecca Halley, who died June 21, at the age of 89, is one of distinction in personal living and in public service. Born in England, she inherited many of the finer traits of her native land. In 1891 she came with her mother and sisters to this country to join her two brothers who were engaged in sheep raising in Colorado. About 1900 the family came to Lemon Grove, moving later to Lemon Grove, where they resided for 30 years.

Hard of hearing from her girlhood, Miss Halley rose above her affliction, using her very great abilities in the service of others and drawing to herself in the warmest friendship people in all walks of life. She helped to found the San Diego Industrial School, which, before the days of vocational training in the public schools, gave boys and girls instruction in carpentering, cooking, sewing, and other manual arts. This institution, located for many years on India street, moved in 1912 into a new building at the corner of National and Beardsley streets, where three years later it merged its work with Neighborhood House, ultimately giving its building and all its assets to the Neighborhood House Association. It was largely through Miss Halley's understanding and active interest that this merger was affected.

Always combining a practical sense of values with the highest aims, Miss Halley gave as valuable service to the Board of Neighborhood House as she had given to the Industrial School, working not only as a board member but also as a volunteer teacher, endeavoring herself to all her colleagues and to the neighborhood. Among the Mexican mothers who came to Neighborhood House no one was more loved than Miss Halley nor more greatly missed when she was no longer able to visit them.

Her interests were wide and her generous spirit was in sympathy with all the humanitarian and cultural activities of her community. She took a special interest in the Young Women's Christian Association, on whose board her sister, Miss Gertrude Halley served for many years.

Lutherans to Start on New Church Soon

Another important building program step was taken by the Lemon Grove Lutheran Church Sunday after Services. The Architect's sketch and plans for the new First Unit of Lutheran Church to be built on the corner of Skyline and Alton in Monterey Heights were approved by the congregation. The plans have been returned to the Architect for its final completion. As soon as the plans are completed and the necessary details cared for, the congregation will begin the construction of the Lutheran Church.

The first unit will set north and south on the 200-foot wide property. It will comfortably seat 250 people; will contain a spacious kitchen, recreation room, mother's room and rooms for Sunday School classes. Future Sunday School rooms will be arranged to form a patio 42 feet by 47 feet. The future church proper will be added on the north end of the first unit, setting east and west.

Work is moving along rapidly on the parsonage, and the Elsters expect to be able to move in somewhere around the first of September. Palmer Svalstad, 7536 San Miguel avenue, is the contractor and builder of the parsonage. He will also construct the Church.

The congregation, under the pastorate of W. LeRoy Elster, is worshipping temporarily in the Seventh Day Adventist Church on the corner of 28th and Main street.

The corner of Skyline and Alton is the scene of busy activity, with the building of the parsonage, the bulldozing of the property to level proportions and the extension of the sewer up Dayton avenue. The over all plans when completed in the future, will finally make use of the whole property. The site will in its final future form the parsonage, the first unit, which is to be the future parish hall, a modern educational unit, the main church unit. The 200 by 275 feet of property will also have a parking lot in the rear, a recreational area for basketball, volleyball, shuttle board courts, as well as many other recreational facilities for the future youth program.

Use the Coupon if Census Taker Missed You

If you were missed in the census count, and your name is now added to the census roll, it will mean another $50.00 of returnable taxes to your city and county. Forrest Raymond, Chairman of the San Diego County Citizens Committee, said today in requesting county-wide co-operation to assure a complete, accurate census count.

He explained that monies collected from local citizens through gasoline taxes and auto license fees are refundable by the state on a per capita basis to cities and counties. Official census figures are used in compiling these refunds. The average refund per person per year to the cities and counties is $5.00. Since the census is normally 10 years, this means a total of $50.00 in returnable taxes.

"If we turn up an additional 5,000 persons in the county who were missed by the census," Raymond said, "it will mean a total of $250,000 to the county over the census period."

Persons missed by the census are asked to fill out the form available in newspapers throughout the county and send it immediately to P. O. Box 666, San Diego 12.

DOES RUSSIA DARE FIGHT?

Overnight, the confusion and partisan bickering over America's foreign relations have given way to determination that a new world war won't overwhelm us for lack of a forthright stand.

If Russia thought that its armed aggression in South Korea would go unchallenged as similar acts of Mussolini, Hitler, and the Japanese war lords did prior to the full flowering of World War II, the immediate American military reaction certainly disabused the Soviets of that thought.

Russia has done a masterful job—up until last week—in waging cold warfare against the western world. But whether the Soviets are anxious to engage in a shooting war is highly debatable.

Some military experts believe that Russia is not as invulnerable to invasion as is commonly supposed. When Germany first invaded Russia during World War II, German troops were welcomed in many border villages, and there were mass surrenders of Russian forces. It was only when Hitler, in his fanatical contempt for all peoples not members of the "master race," instituted the scorched earth policy, that Russian resistance stiffened.

Furthermore, it is estimated today that one of every 10 Russians is confined in a slave labor camp, which would indicate that the Russian Communist Party has a subversive problem far greater than their own fifth column poses to the Democracies.

By its immediate and forceful action, the United States has, in effect, called Russia's bluff. There will be no piecemeal Soviet conquest. If Russia wants a full-scale war, it's hers for the asking now—not six months, a year or five years hence when she has grown immeasurably stronger by petty territorial thievery.

Does Russia dare fight? The next few months will bring the answer.

BORROWING TROUBLE

The old-fashioned banker of story and legend was a hard-headed, cautious, tight-fisted individual, not easily swayed by emotional appeals for funds.

There was good reason for that stereotyped concept. Bankers are risk-takers, and the money they risk belongs to other people. They have to protect their depositors and earn a profit for them at the same time, and that isn't easy.

There's evidence, however, that today's banker is becoming a little less cautious, less tight-fisted, a little easier for a prospective borrower to break down for a touch. Writing in The Kipling Magazine, the president of a Kentucky bank implies that bankers are getting too soft. The reason that's happening, he argues, is that banks don't take the risks they used to. More and more, government is guaranteeing credit, underwriting risk, and subsidizing losses.

In the last two decades, the bank president pointed out, government loan guarantees have increased from only a few hundred million dollars to more than 20 billion. Bankers, he maintains, are well on the way to becoming mere middle-men for government agencies.

If the writer is correct, and the trend continues, socialized banking would appear to be the ultimate goal. Instead of traditional bankers' caution in the interest of conserving depositors' funds, there would be substituted a complete lack of caution, for the funds at the government bankers' disposal would be tax funds. There's evidence of that already in the various reckless, unsound RFC loans that have resulted in a whopping loss to the taxpayers.

For borrowers looking for easy money, it's doubtless more pleasant to deal with a soft-hearted banker. But perhaps the traditional hard-headed one makes for a sounder economy for the people as a whole.

IDEAS FOR RIGHT LIVING WORTH KEEPING IN MIND

A Lemon Grove friend handed us these few lines, thinking we might want to pass them along to our readers. They are good reading, and all of us can benefit by reading them and putting them into practice:

"There exists in life six things which we ought to learn. These are:

First—To laugh. Laughing is better than any amount of medicine. Whenever you smile or laugh, the mind is liberated for that moment from all the burdens and cares of human life.

Second—To know how to tell a good story. A tale amusing and well narrated is as acceptable in any company as a sunbeam in the dreary room of an invalid.

Third—To learn to conceal your own regrets and disappointments. The world has sorrow enough without listening to your complaints and injustices, too.

Fourth—To refrain from grumbling, even in secret. If your circumstances are not always pleasant and agreeable, remember that they might be worse.

Fifth—To greet friends with cheerfulness. They already have troubles enough of their own without feeling that they are about to share another's.

Sixth—To help loyalty every object and effort which our conscience acknowledges as worthy, chiefly our homes, our churches, and our lodges. We should always feel that we can benefit from these factors of a happy life only in proportion to the efforts and sacrifices we make for them.

At long last they are discovering that the smog in Los Angeles is caused to great extent by the exhaust of autos. Los Angeles county has more automobiles than many of the eastern and mid-west states, and they are all jammed into an area of less than 450 square miles. In addition to these autos, transportation companies are taking off electric cars and replacing them with buses, thereby adding to the carbon monoxide which the public must breathe. It shouldn't take an expert to solve the cause of the smog in the Los Angeles area. San Diego metropolitan area is going to be faced with the same problem with its present rate of growth. And in the not too distant future, either.

Initiative bills now being circulated to exempt personal property from taxation would be a serious blow to the financing of the public schools. Approximately one-fifth of the assessed valuation comes from the personal property tax. The net effect of such a measure would be to transfer taxation from personal property and load it on the already overburdened shoulders of the real property owners. It would also entail costly elections to enable the school districts to vote monies in access of present rates. Therefore we urge that all citizens interested in the welfare of the schools as well as those interested in other governmental services on local level refuse to sign such petitions.

If you want to sell anything, put a price on it, call Homeland 6-1168 and run a Want Ad in The Review.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

Today in the great American political arena, even the experts are finding it difficult to determine for which team the players are picking the ball—the fact that Democrat is stenciled across some shirt fronts and Republican on others notwithstanding.

It has become common sight to see Democrats working hand in glove with Republicans to stymie the "fair deal" and protect "free enterprise"—just as some Republicans are bound and determined to out deal the "fair deal."

Last year Senator John W. Bricker, Republican of Ohio, suggested that it might not be a bad idea for some of the Nation's politicians to switch jerseys to the public and political parties both might know who was on which team. Not too long ago Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota, seconded the idea and called on those Republicans espousing the Democratic platform to join the Bourbons and furtively suggested that those Democrats who insist on joining against the "fair deal" join up with the GOP.

Along the same lines, Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat of Georgia, has predicted that conservative Republicans and Democrats, in the foreseeable future, will forge a new "Constitutional Party" in a drastic political realignment.

The nub of Senator Russell's idea is that the traditionally conservative Solid South should forsake the "fair deal" Democrats and team up with the Republicans who, in turn, should purge their ranks of "me-tooers."

It is significant, politics concede, that Senator Russell—Southern choice as Democratic presidential nominee in opposition to President Truman at the 1948 convention—is the first prominent southern congressman to broach the merger-of-conservatives thought. It is a salient point, to that the "fair dealers" have been dealt defeat in their efforts this year to take over the Southern Democrats. According to election analysts, the Southern Democrats view the defeat of Senator Pepper of Florida and Senator Graham of North Carolina—both Truman stalwarts—as the most important elections in two decades.

Contrary to general thinking on the subject, some politicians insist that the major political realignment being championed by Senator Bricker, Humphrey and Russell would have substantial public acceptance. They cite, for example, that Democrats Scott Lucas, "fair deal" zealot of Illinois and Harry Byrd, sincere conservative of Virginia, have no more business being members of the same political party than do Republicans Wayne Morse of Oregon and Robert Taft of Ohio.

It's doubtful that a political revolution is in the immediate offing, however—no matter how good an idea it might be. Most observers lean to the belief that the most that could come of the current situation would be for the Republicans to start winning in a few Southern states and for a few GOP renegades to switch party affiliation.

Sparks

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT JAMES DORAIS

Now that all the noses—or nearly all at any rate—have been counted in the Nation's biggest census undertaking, one significant finding has been established: the suburbs are growing much faster than the cities.

That situation is true the Nation over. And it is especially noticeable in California where emphasis on outdoor living has accelerated the exodus from big town to small town.

Even Los Angeles, which chalked up a spectacular 30 percent gain over the last census 10 years ago, failed to equal the tremendous percentage population increase in the area surrounding it.

That is true despite the fact that, unlike most large cities, many of Los Angeles' suburbs are located inside its city limits.

Many cities which were disappointed in their population count apparently didn't take into consideration that their mounting traffic problems, crowding downtown areas and other indications of growth and congestion were largely accounted for by the daytime presence of commuters from the mushrooming communities at their outskirts.

The slowdown of city growth and speedup of county growth poses real problems for both city and county.

Many cities already are face to face with the problem of providing services for the thousands of daytime workers in their midst who pay local taxes elsewhere. As the trend continues, cities will be forced to find sources other than property taxes to pay for expansion and maintenance of streets and parking facilities, increased police protection, sanitation, food inspection and other city services necessary to accommodate the fast increasing army of commuters and suburban visitors who desert the big town when the five-o'clock whistle blows.

The sales tax isn't an entirely satisfactory answer to the problem, for many suburban areas are developing attractive shopping centers of their own, and large downtown department stores, in order to compete, are establishing suburban branches. Income taxes on city payrolls may become the general solution to the problem. This tax already has been adopted in St. Louis, Philadelphia, Cleveland and several other large cities.

Counties that have been deluged with newcomers have problems of their own. Many county court houses just haven't realized until the census count brought the full story to light, how fast the areas they are obliged to serve have expanded. Tax assessments are uneven and in many cases unrealistic. Schools are overflowing, hospitals, jails, theatres, churches, roads are inadequate. Land values are soaring.

Mr. and Mrs. Typical America seem to have decided that what they want in the way of living is a small home with a plot of ground away from the noise and bustle of the city, where Junior and his small sister won't have to dodge speeding automobiles when there's a baseball to be chased. It's a great idea, but City Fathers and small town officials too are acquiring a king-size headache because of it.

SHORT STORY

See What I Mean?

By Richard HUI Wilkinson

EXCEPT for the fact that Allen Bursley was a coward, Maybelle's happiness was complete. Being a Wesleyan, even though the once great properties of her forefathers had shriveled to a mere 20-acre farm on the outskirts of Stockbridge, she could not abide cowards.

Worst of all, Allen Bursley didn't seem to think that being branded a coward was at all important.

"Why," he asked, "should I want to fight Steve Legge? I've nothing against him. He's done nothing to offend me."

"Why?" she stormed. "You ask me why? Isn't it enough to be told he's saying such dreadful things about you?"

"But suppose the stories aren't true? And what if they are?"

"Allen Bursley," Maybelle said tensely, "you listen to me. When you came up here and bought the Thompson place and tried to make a go of farming, everyone laughed. But you fooled 'em. You made the place pay by dint of hard work, and then you made me fall in love with you — and I was tremendously happy and wanted to get married only —"

"Only," said Allen, "everybody figured you were Steve Legge's girl, and when we became engaged Steve began to threaten. And now you won't marry me, till I've licked him."

"I wouldn't marry a coward," said Maybelle scornfully. The word spread like wildfire. Maybelle Wesleyan had broken off her engagement with Allen Bursley, because Allen had admitted being afraid of Steve Legge. Steve became more swaggering. He yearned for some excuse to bully the city man.

THE OPPORTUNITY came a fortnight later in front of the village postoffice. It was evening and more than half of the town's population was gathered there. Allen Bursley came out onto the porch, his attention concentrated on a letter in his hand. He did not see the outthrust foot of Steve Legge, and fell over it, saving himself by grasping a post.

Look where you're going, you clumsy idiot! Kicking a man in the leg."

Allen withheld the apology that rose to his lips, and said instead: "Keep your legs under you if you don't want them kicked."

"Say! Who do you think you're talking to, you shriveled-up city sissy?"

Allen hesitated, carefully folded his letter and tucked it into his pocket. "Legge," he said, "I don't want to quarrel with you—"

Steve let out a roar of contemptuous laughter. "Afraid, eh? Well, we don't abide cowards—"

"But," finished Allen quietly, "since you insist, let me advise you, you brought it on yourself."

Steve lunged and something struck him like a sledge-hammer and set him back on his heels.

He struck out blindly, accompanying his blows with foul curses, only to have the curses jammed between his teeth with the same sledge hammer.

Above him Allen Bursley heard a feminine cry from behind and turned to see Maybelle running toward him. He held out his arms, but she stopped, hand over mouth, trying to get out the cry of warning, and falling. The club, held in the hand of Steve Legge, descended crushingly on the back of Allen's head.

When Allen opened his eyes his head was pillowed in the lap of Maybelle. She was looking up at someone and talking. "Allen licked him," she was saying. "He's much stronger than he looks—"

Allen's eyes twinkled. "No, I'm not," he said unexpectedly. "It wasn't because I'm strong. It was knowledge—knowing how to handle myself, like knowing how to farm. That's the trouble with you folks up here. You don't know how to do things. See what I mean?"

"All I ask is that you teach me how to make you a good wife forever and ever."

Louis A. Miller

Left as dead on a battlefield in Germany, Louis A. Miller, today is very much alive and fighting in the battles of Kentucky farmers for better living conditions, water, sewage and land conservation.

It is my belief that Miller's postwar rehabilitation is even more remarkable than his war record," said his former commanding officer, John F. Rhoades, lieutenant-colonel, U.S. Cavalry, now a science instructor at West Point.

He had been so badly wounded that army surgeons shook their heads and labeled him a "museum of pathology."

Miller's wartime record was one of courage, leadership and devotion to duty. His civilian record in fighting back from the very brink of the grave—a long and lonely battle, by himself — is even more commendable and worthy of praise and honor.

It is for this meritorious ability to overcome these serious war-time handicaps and become a self-sustaining citizen that the Disabled American Veterans has selected him as "The Hero of the Month." The selection is part of a DAV national program to honor each month a seriously disabled veteran who has successfully rehabilitated himself.

The experience of these men and thousands of others, according to David M. Brown, national DAV commander, emphasizes the importance of safeguarding the rehabilitation program for disabled veterans and not letting false economy moves wreck the program.

Miller, a native of Louisville, Ky., and a graduate and star football player on the St. Xavier School team of that city, served with Troop C, 4th squadron, 4th U.S. Cavalry (Mechanized). He

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

HOME FREEZING

Frozen foods now have a place on most home menus, either as a regular item, as an occasional emergency dish, or as an out-of-season treat, says Marguerite Wurtzbaugh, Home Advisor of the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California. The homemaker, whether she lives on a farm or in the city, knows the advantages of frozen foods as time savers and as a way of providing variety in her meals all year round. She is no longer limited to serving only seasonal foods, for July's strawberries may appear in December's shortcake.

Many types of home freezing units are now available, from the 4-cubic foot storage chest to the large walk-in box with attached chill room. The home unit should be capable of maintaining a temperature of 0 deg. F. or lower, when surrounded by an air temperature as high as 100 deg. F. It should have at least four inches of insulation on sides and bottom, and at least three inches on the lid or door. It should be able to freeze at least 5% of its total capacity per day.

When deciding on the minimum size for your family, estimate the total amount of fruit, vegetables, meat, and other products your family will need for one year.

(How much of this will be fresh?) Find out which food your family prefers frozen rather than preserved by other methods, such as canning. Determine how much of the food must be in the locker at any one time. Estimate how much meat must go in at one time. Also, will the family increase or decrease in the next five or 10 years. Check the following figures for the approximate space necessary for different items in the freezing unit.

One cubic foot of space holds about 10 pounds of fruit and syrup, or 25 to 30 pounds of vegetables, or 35 to 40 pounds of meat. More space per pound is required for bulky items, such as whole poultry.

One cubic foot of space also holds about 40 pint cartons (standard size). Each pint carton holds three or four servings, or one pound of frozen fruit and syrup, or 10 to 12 ounces of vegetables.

KEEP THE HENS COOL

The hen cannot adapt herself to high temperature. R. H. Adolph, Farm Advisor of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, today suggested that poultry producers take steps now to make their hens more comfortable on the hot days ahead. Thus they can save some production, and possibly the lives of some of the birds.

Cooling systems have been installed on many poultry ranches. Overhead sprinklers are placed about every six feet over the roofs of the poultry houses. These are used to sprinkle the roof when the temperature rises above 85 or 90 degrees F. Adolph points out that those already having sprinklers in should check them right away. Several growers have found that water standing in these pipes during the winter months have caused broken equipment due to freezing temperatures.

Another method of cooling the poultry house that is commonly used is spraying a fine mist of water inside the house. It also wets the birds and hastens cooling by evaporation of the water. The litter becomes damp and cool. The birds dust themselves in these cool spots.

Adolph offers some precautions that apply to spraying inside the poultry house. The particles of water must be finely broken up. If the spray is permitted to run continuously, the litter becomes too wet and humidity is increased excessively. The fine spray should run about 10 minutes at a time. The performance is repeated about every two hours as long as needed.

Adolph also cautions that nesting equipment and housing must be checked to see that sufficient air movement is present to prevent suffocation of birds. At recent poultry meetings held by poultrymen were urged to try bottom nesting equipment as a means for preventing poultry losses due to suffocation in nests.

CARELESSNESS—CAUSE OF FIRE LOSSES

Fire weather will soon put half of California in a highly inflammable condition. It does every year.

"Each citizen must realize that 90% of the fire loss in California is the result of human carelessness," warns Woodbridge Metcalf, Extension forester of the College of Agriculture, University of California. "A large part of fire prevention consists of basic precautions and law observance," he added.

Fire weather is the forest ranger's term for a combination of factors that make plants, trees and buildings tinder dry. When the humidity is below 30%, winds are 25 miles or more, and temperature is 90 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit and the fire hazards are great, it's fire weather. Radio warnings go out at such times, which may occur any time from midsummer through late fall.

By cleaning up rubbish and debris around or under buildings, owners and operators can take a first step in fire prevention. A firetrack around haystacks and individual buildings has saved many a farm structure in California.

Through informing himself of the location of the nearest fire-fighting apparatus and keeping the phone number handy, the citizen has two strikes on a fire getting out of control. With a water hose with good pressure, both inside and outside the house, he has the first means ready for dousing flames before the firemen arrive.

Many farmers have a five gallon knapsack tank with a trombone-type pump in their barns and outbuildings. Such tanks, called Indian or ranger tanks, are well worth their cost, says Metcalf.

It's good policy to shut down the harvester or truck engine in open grain fields or ranges when the wind gets strong, states the forester. A spark from an engine has set off many costly fires.

Then there are the laws that everyone is expected to observe. It's against the law to throw any lighted item, a cigarette or cigar, from any moving vehicle.

All camp fires must be extinguished and completely extinguished before being abandoned. National forests require permits for building camp fires, the permits being issued by adjacent ranger stations or stores.

Lightning causes only one or two percent of fires in California, and such configurations are often easily put out, since they usually occur on high places without heavy vegetation. Governmental agencies are all co-operating to keep down the fire loss. One common method is the periodic cleanup campaign. Thousands of miles of road shoulders have been cleaned of weeds by highway patrolmen. When farmers and ranchers have plowed back an additional firebreak along the road, valuable protection is provided.

HOUSE FLY IS STILL ACTIVE

Don't count the house fly out. He's been floored by several new insecticides during years and his extinction has been freely predicted. But he manages to fight back, and remain a troublesome pest.

According to Farm Advisor E. C. Moore, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, the newest threat to the fly is lindane, said to be five times as powerful as DDT. It has a three-way killing action, by vapor action, stomach poisoning and actual contact. An application not only results in rapid kill but also keeps a long-lasting residual action against flies which alight where it has been applied. It not only destroys flies but kills lice, ticks, horn-flies and fleas.

But scientists already have found that some flies develop resistance to this newer insecticide, just as some did to DDT. Naturally, these flies that can tolerate the chemical are the ones that live to propagate, and this resistance is carried on to other generations.

So, entomologists suggest using different sprays during the year in fighting the flies. This lessens the possibility of the pests' developing a resistance against a particular one. Among the materials suggested, in addition to lindane and DDT, are methoxychlor and chlordane. Of these certain ones such as DDT and chlordane are not recommended for use in dairies because of possible carryover injury to persons.

FEEDING OF CATTLE FOR SLAUGHTER

The feeding of cattle for slaughter has moved ahead in California, particularly during the past two decades, reports Farm Advisor Fred W. Dorman, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Until the late 1920's, feeding of cattle for slaughter was practiced only on an extremely limited scale. The number moved up moderately from 1930 to 1939, records showing an average of 91,000 cattle on feed as of January 1, which is about the peak of the feeding season. From 1941 to 1945 the average number was about 169,000 yearly. This number increased until it reached the all-time record of 262,000 on December 1, 1948.

While, for the most part, cattle feeding is concentrated in the hands of relatively few large-scale operators, more and more ranchers are feeding one or more loads of cattle annually.

An increasing number of cattle from the lower mountain slopes and foothills is fattened on irrigated landino clover, alfalfa and grass pastures. This has been an influence in improving the beef that is produced from these animals.

GUARD AGAINST PEACH TREE BORER

The Pacific peach tree borer can cause a gridding effect on such fruit and nut trees as the almond, apricot, cherry, prune and plum. Growers at times overlook the damage until too late to save the tree.

According to Farm Advisor Bernard J. Hall, of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, for several years the recommended control measure has been to sprinkle a continuous ring of paradichlorobenzene (P.D.B.) around the tree during late summer and fall. From 3-4 to one ounce of the material per tree is the recommended dosage. This needs to be sprinkled around the tree in a continuous ring about two inches wide and from two to four inches from the base of the tree. The ground around the base of the tree is leveled before applying this fumigant, and the P.D.B. crystals should be covered with earth after the ring is completed. Disadvantages of this method are the labor involved and possible damage to young trees from the treatment. However, it remains the most effective treatment to date.

TASTY WAYS WITH TURKEY

Do you know that turkey, traditionally served roasted for the holidays, can be prepared many other ways and used to sparkle up daily menus throughout the year?

Well, it can, says Mrs. Marguerite Wurtzbaugh, Home Advisor of the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California. And there are many times when turkey is one of the least expensive meats on the market.

In the booklet "Tasty Ways with Turkey," you'll find over 30 recipes for using turkey in savory dishes—dishes that will save on your food budget and bring cheers of delight from your family.

Turkeys need not be cooked whole. They may be cut up and used in parts. Turkey steaks (cut crosswise from the breast of half-birds) are about right for one serving. Turkey hindquarters are about enough for one meal for a small family. In many cities turkeys are sold in parts—farm folks can usually keep turkey parts in deep freeze.

In this booklet you will find recipes for using turkey by the piece such as turkey steaks, breasts and hindquarters; using cooked turkey; recipes using turkey for breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner, buffet meals, supper or midnight snacks; interesting turkey recipes from foreign countries, and turkey prepared in many other ways.

These booklets can be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Service, Room 404, U. S. Customs Bldg., San Diego 1, California.

In honey-bee society, the worker bee is in command. It is she that controls the output of eggs by the queen and the sex of such eggs. The control in sex is based on a glandular mechanism within the queen, says Dr. S. E. Flanders, entomologist in the Experiment Station of the University of California at Riverside.

As many as 4,000,000 sperms are stored in the queen during her mating flight. Two or three of them are apportioned to each female egg by means of the glandular arrangement of the queen. Unfertilized eggs become male bees, or drones.

Worker bees construct brood cells of two sizes in which the queen lays her eggs. The smaller-sized cells cause the queen to lay fertilized female eggs and the larger ones cause the deposition of unfertilized male eggs. The larger brood cells are usually built in small groups among the more numerous, smaller ones.

While laying eggs at the rate of 2,000 a day, the queen inspects each cell with her antenna before oviposition. From the antenna go stimuli that cause secretion of the spermathecal gland. A high hydrostatic pressure back of the sperm valve results, then the sperm capsule moves outward and permeate the glandular secretion.

While the sperm-filled secretion is under high pressure, each egg as it passes the opening of the sperm duct causes the valve to open for an instant and emit a minute quantity of secretion containing several heads into a large or drone cell, the stimulus is too small to maintain high secretion by the spermathecal gland.

Thus the glandular responses to stimuli received through the antenna of the queen from the cell construction plan of the workers control the sex of honey bees.

Thy Will Be Done
We love our boys—we love our girls.

We love old glory, too.
We love this land—our fathers' gift.

To it we will be true.
So let us pray we will be free
From the clutches of the "Bear,"
There is no peace when God's shut out.

But he will hear this prayer:
Dear God we ask, 'Thy will be done,'
Give us the faith we need.
If we are wrong, show us the right.

Make us a friend indeed.
We place our lives within thy hands.
May we never doubt Thy will.
Let us live right, each day, today.

Until we climb that hill.

Forgets Faces
Look Before Leaping
Act of Nature

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

State laws vary. For personal guidance, see your local attorney.

Does Forgetting Names and Faces Indicate Mental Weakness?

The children of a wealthy widow were dismayed to find that they had been left out of her will entirely. They determined to contest the will, on the ground that their mother had been "mentally incompetent." To prove it, they recalled that she would often start telling a joke, get half way through, and then forget the punch line. Moreover, they said she would introduce herself to a stranger at a party, shake hands, and then a few minutes later—do the same thing with the same person. But the court found this evidence inadequate to prove incompetency, and held that the will was valid. The judge figured that a woman should not be considered mentally unbalanced—just because she lacked a few social graces!

Should You Wait Until the Last Moment—Before Jumping From a Burning Building?

A careless janitor dropped a match in the basement of an old hotel, and fire soon enveloped the building. A guest on the third floor, seeing flames in the corridor, quickly decided to take the only other exit—the window. He jumped, breaking both legs in his fall. Later he sued the hotel for damages. At the trial, the hotel attorney argued: "The fire in the corridor wasn't very bad at the time this man jumped out the window. If he had gone through the corridor, he probably wouldn't have been injured at all." But the court still held the hotel liable. The judge said that a person can't be expected to make a discriminating choice of exits—at such a moment!

If a Landslide Derails a Train, Is the Railroad to Blame?

The scenic route of a certain railroad led through a narrow gully. One day an express train arrived at this spot just after a hard rain had soaked the sides of the passageway. Jostled by the vibration of the engine, the water-soaked earth came cascading down in a sudden landslide. The train was derailed, and five passengers were injured. When they sued for damages, the company protested: "This accident was the result of natural forces, so why should we take the blame?" But the court granted the passengers' claims. The judge said that, in building its roadways, a railroad must take into account the ordinary hazards of weather—plus the law of gravity.

May a Parent Collect Damages For Being Kept After School?

A schoolgirl made so much noise during class that her teacher kept her after school for 15 minutes. A few days later, the teacher was arrested to find himself named defendant in a "false imprisonment."

action. The girl claimed: "I hadn't committed any crime, and therefore my teacher had no legal right to detain me against my will." However, the court turned down the girl's demand. The judge said that a teacher must have some kind of disciplinary powers, to keep his students under control.

A man was arrested after casting his ballot in a city election. It seems he had once served a sentence for burglary, and a state law forbade all ex-felons to vote. At his trial, the defendant pleaded: "It's true I'm an ex-convict, and it's true I voted. But Your Honor, I never even heard of this state law until I was arrested." However, the court found the man guilty as charged. The judge said that ignorance of the law is no excuse—because that would provide an easy "out" for any lawbreakers.

SHORT STORY

Reputation
For Fairness

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

MIKE DIDN'T INTEND to be unreasonable about it. He had a reputation for fairness, and he meant to live up to it. There wasn't a person alive who didn't have faults. And knowing this to be a fact, Mike could understand why such a gorgeous creature as Serena Wood told short of being a paragon. Not that Serena's faults were anything to worry about. If they had been Mike would never have asked her to marry him. Serena's greatest fault, he thought, was her inability to get ready to go any place on time. Mike adopted a unique method in order to cure this deficiency. For a time he decided to fall in with Serena's habits.

Thus, he would dispel any possible doubt in her mind regarding his purpose. Presently he would begin to get himself ready on time and all around waiting. Serena couldn't help noticing and take heed.

Then there was Serena's habit of going into a room, switching on an electric light and going out again without thinking to extinguish it. Mike decided to adopt the same method in effecting this cure also.

During the next half year Mike noted with some satisfaction that Serena had already begun to feel his stronger personality. She was allowing herself a bit more time to get dressed for parties, and once or twice suggested to Mike that he hurry up.

By the time the six months was up, Serena had improved greatly. He decided to forego his tapering off, letting well enough alone. Three months passed and the situation had taken on quite a new aspect. Serena, unconsciously, was doing a lot of walking from one room to another switching off lights that Mike had left burning.

THINGS REACHED a point at the end of a year that called for some sort of undertaking. Oddly, it was Serena who brought matters to a head.

"I realize," she told Mike crossly, "that everyone has their faults. But it does seem to me that you could attach a little more importance to things around the house. I've done my best to make you change your ways, I've even resorted to artifice."

"Artifice?"

"I mean, like telling you we have to be at a party 15 minutes before hand in the hopes that you'll get ready on time. I've deliberately gone into the bedroom to switch off the lights after you come out, hoping that you would notice. I've got out of bed and padded way to the kitchen to shut off a dripping faucet."

"I didn't mean that you were weak-minded or anything like that. We all have our faults."

that you've left running. I declare, Mike, you can't have a very strong personality."

"Now wait a minute, Serena. Something's wrong here. We've got to have an understanding." "We certainly have. From now on if you leave the lights burning they stay burning and you can pay the bill. If you're late for parties I'll go on ahead and you can make your own excuses."

"But about this personality business. Now—"

"I didn't mean that you were weak-minded or anything like that. We all have our faults. Why, even I have some. I suppose I've tried to help you overcome yours. But from now on you'll have to shift for yourself, unless you can give me some cooperation."

"Cooperation? Why, hang it, I did those things deliberately to break you of them, and now I find myself doing them automatically—and—liking it."

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Graham stared at each other. "It's my fault that you have faults and I have faults because of your faults. Oh, darling, Mike, don't you see what's happened? We made the mistake of thinking ourselves perfect. Let's start all over again—now that we have an understanding, and work the other way."

"O. K.," said Mike. "O. K.," he grinned, remembering he had a reputation for fairness and now was the time to live up to it.

Don't become exhausted through work or hard play. Don't stay too long in cold water or sit around in wet clothes. And always wash hands before eating. Watch for feverishness, sore throat, headache, upset stomach or sore muscles. They may—or may not—mean polio. Call your doctor and then, if help is needed contact the National Foundation Chapter in your area.

SHORT STORY

City Cops

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

I'VE INVESTIGATED some queer cases but the jewel robbery up at River's End Lodge topped them all. Tracy and I were dumb; we're ready to admit that, but after all, we're city cops not primitive wilderness natives.

3 Minute Fiction

The reason we were called in was because Homer Livermore's wife had lost $30,000 worth of gems, and neither she nor Homer trusted or had faith in Eben Jackson, the local constable. Jackson met us at the station, and it wouldn't take a sleuth to see he was sore at the Livermores.

"I'll show you what I already found out," he told us briefly, "then let your smarties dope out the rest."

He took us up to the lodge and showed where a ladder had been placed against the house. Then he allowed the thief had probably taken his loot and skunk off in the woods to hide.

Then Tracy had an idea. "If we gotta browse around through the bushes we ought to have a native guide."

Eben recommended Bronco Pete, who, it seemed, was a guide who didn't have enough money to buy a license for himself, hence was out of work. We explained our predicament to him and he shrugged indifferently. Then Tracy flashed a $20 bill and he changed his mind.

He took the twenty, and a promise of two more after a week's work, and went away. He came back the next morning dressed up in new high-laced boots, riding breeches, a checked shirt and a big hat. He was mighty proud, and looked like the pictures you see of northwoods guides.

Well, sir, we started out, we trekked through the woods for a while day. Then Bronco Pete led us to a deserted shack. Outside we found a set of fresh footprints, the heels of which were marked with a common iron cleat.

"Chances are," said Eben, "if we find the owner of these here bootmarks we'll have us the thief. I seen tracks like that around the lodge beneath the window."

"Pete," I says, "find us the owner of these boots and there's an extra twenty in it for you."

Pete set off through the brush like a bound on the scent. Tracy and I followed wearily.

Pete led us straight back to the lodge, and there, sure enough, were marked footprints beneath the bedroom window.

"The thing to do," Eben told us, "is for you two nannies to make yourselves comfortable in the shack, an' nab the thief when he comes home."

It wasn't a pleasant prospect, but it seemed like the only bet.

He was mighty proud, and looked like the pictures you see of northwoods guides.

So Tracy and I bought ourselves some supplies, and moved into the shack.

The third day, Eben dropped around to see how we were doing. We told him in no uncertain terms, and if he wanted to spell us for a day we'd split the reward.

"Mean it?" he said.

"Sure we mean it. You lay your hands on the thief, you get $2500 cash."

"Come with me," he said. He took us directly to the jail and pointed through the bars at a prisoner, Bronco Pete.

Well, sir, this was it. Bronco had committed the theft all right, but it didn't do him much good, because he couldn't dispose of the jewels. Nor could he spend the $50 in cash he'd swiped along the rocks, because he hadn't worked for months, and to do so would have aroused suspicion. Then we came along and advanced him $20 and he bought himself a new outfit with it, including a new pair of boots with cleat marks on the heels.

Eben was suspicious because he knew you couldn't buy a fancy costume like Pete had for less than $50. But Eben let us go ahead with the case, as per the request of the Livermores, till we got fed up; till, in fact, we offered to split the reward.

SHORT STORY

He Spoke His Piece

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

WITHOUT REALIZING it Armine had been watching the young man with the black hair and blue eyes. She admitted to herself that he was good looking. Also, he wore his evening clothes with just the right degree of casualness; his face was pleasant and guileless. Dangerous, she thought. The type of man who couldn't be trusted.

Deceptive. Like Loring Brooks. Mere thought of Loring gave her a funny little pang. And then the young man with the blue eyes and black hair started toward her. He waved his way in among the dancers and tapped Sever Clark on the shoulder. "Mind if I cut in?" he asked.

"Hope you don't mind? Believe me it took courage."

"Did it?" said Armine coldly. "Am I to feel flattered?"

He grinned broadly. "Sorry. I'll quit if you say so?"

"And leave me stranded in the middle of the floor?"

"Well, then, when the music stops." But when the music stopped they weren't on the floor at all. They were out on the terrace, looking up at the moon, and Armine was saying, "I do wish you'd take me back. I'm cold."

"You can't be cold. It's a warm night. Besides, if you start to go back alone I'll grab your arm. And that will make a scene."

She looked at him angrily, but he only grinned. "I've half a mind to do it. It might teach you a lesson."

"It probably would," he admitted. "But please don't. You see, I've been watching you all evening and planning this campaign—bringing you out here, I mean."

"The idea!" Armine tossed her head. "Well, you can bring me right back again."

"Not until I say what I have to say."

"Indeed! And what makes you think I'm interested in what you have to say?"

SUDDENLY HE sobered. "That's the trouble with you — you're never willing to give a fellow a chance. You take him at his face value and let it go at that. It's not fair."

What! Certainly you can't be serious. If this is some sort of joke, it's a poor one. Please take me back!"

"Wait." He gripped her arm. His face was tense. "You've got to hear me. I know it all sounds crazy. But it isn't. Last year, when I went away in such a hurry it was because my brother had been hurt in a football game. I wrote you the day after I arrived in California. Air mail. It wasn't till a month later that I learned the plane crashed and burned. Then I knew it was too late."

"Oh, Loring, what a stupid little fool I've been!"

I came on east, bringing my brother along with me. He got well."

He broke off. She was staring at him in amazement. He gestured helplessly. "I tried to look you up, but you'd gone south for the winter. And then in the spring the university sent me up to Canada to do some research work. I got back a week ago, learned you were in town and came here tonight, hoping to see you."

"He leaned forward and grasped her shoulders, said fiercely. 'I love you, have always loved you. You haven't been out of my thoughts for a minute. You've got to believe that. I thought at first you did... when you didn't object to coming out here with me.'"

He turned away, got half-way to the door when she called. "Loring!" He swung back, and she came up to him. "Was Robert Brooks... your brother?"

"Yes. How did you know?"

"I didn't know. But I read about him in the papers. And I read about the crash of the plane, too... Oh, Loring, what a stupid little fool I've been!"

She was in his arms, sobbing hysterically. Loring held her tight; presently tilted her chin and kissed her mouth. "Darling! I... I hate to think of what might have happened if you had objected to coming out on the terrace."

"Objected? Why, my precious... if you hadn't brought me out I would have died!"

Law Protects Jobs for All in Service

Assurance of job retention rights, similar to that which was in effect during World War II, is provided for armed forces reservists who volunteer for active duty as well as draftees under the existing Federal statutes. It was pointed out today by Congressman Richard M. Nixon, who said he has received a number of written and long distance telephone inquiries from California on the subject since the outbreak of hostilities in Korea.

"From the veterans viewpoint, the present law is even more advantageous than that which applied during the last war," Nixon declared, "because it fixes responsibility upon the employer to find a position for a man who returns from the service with a disability, which was not previously the case."

One of the inquiries received by Congressman Nixon came from an entire unit of naval air reservists attached to the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station who were planning to volunteer for active duty.

"Job protection is provided for volunteers for a period of one enlistment, or until the serviceman is able to obtain his release from active duty," Nixon said.

A considerable number of men who were in service during the last war and who are contemplating re-enlistment also have written to Congressman Nixon expressing concern over the discontinuance of dependency benefits he said.

"While it is true that no provision is presently made for dependency benefits," Nixon declared, "the military pay raise bill which was passed by Congress last year more than compensated for this loss."

Give Procedure on Vet's Insurance Dividend Checks

Announcement has been made of the procedure to be followed by veterans who have not received their National Service Life Insurance dividend checks, by G. H. Mitchell, Veterans Administration Officer.

"For those who have received their application acknowledgment card and no further word, a special form is available at the Regional Office, 325 B street, and at VA Office in El Centro. If a direct letter is written," Mitchell explained, "the issuance of the check will be expedited by furnishing: Name used in service, current address, all service serial numbers, all insurance numbers, dividend application number, VA claim number (if disabled) and date of birth. Address the letter to Special Insurance Projects Service, Veterans Administration Central Office, Washington 25, D. C."

Any eligible veteran who applied for the Special Dividend and has not received the check or application acknowledgment card is advised to forward another application to Washington, D. C., giving full information, and clearly marking the card "Duplicate."

"These procedures do not apply to beneficiaries or heirs of deceased service personnel who are expecting dividend payments. This is an entirely separate operation being handled principally by the 13 District Offices and is still under way," Mitchell concluded.

Many Names Turned in for Census

"I WASN'T COUNTED WERE YOU?"

More than 2,200 names supposedly uncounted in the census were turned in to the San Diego County Citizens Census Committee in the first week of the campaign for a complete, accurate census count.

Forrest Raymond, committee chairman, declared that "The response to the initial appeal has been most gratifying. While some of the persons sending in forms printed in newspapers and other periodicals probably had already been counted, we believe that the net result will be favorable."

At the same time, Raymond praised the fine "co-operation" given by publications, radio stations, and other media throughout the county in publicizing the census campaign. He said it would continue until the end of July.

Local officials have pointed out that every name added to the census rolls mean at least $50 of returnable taxes to the city and county over the next 10 years. At the same time, names added to the census help the city and county in many other ways—in political representation, in allocations of goods by manufacturers, and in allocation of funds by state and federal government units.

HAVE YOU BEEN COUNTED IN THE 1950 CENSUS?
